

“Most of all, the negotiations have always shown you to do what you say you will do. The professionalism is unsurpassed.”

Juan M., a cement supplier in southern California and northern Mexico, turned to Aero & Marine Tax Professionals for help in getting a sales tax exemption for the purchase of a Cessna Citation airplane.

Juan M. said “We’re a cement supplier for the geothermal industry in the northern part of Mexico. We also import and export concrete manufacturing equipment and masonry manufacturing equipment. In general, all types of construction materials. We resell on both sides of the border, mostly in California on the north side of the border. We needed an aircraft because frequently contracts for the business are closed on the location of the project, or where the materials are required. Also, a lot of our clients when they install equipment, they need technical follow-up and all kinds of after-sale attention. The aircraft allows us to take care of our clients in a timely manner, and with the quality that they require so that they continue to do business with us. This allows us to grow our business.”

“With Aero & Marine Tax Professionals, the personal contact was a great benefit. The contacts were totally professional. Everything got done in a timely manner. Most of all, the negotiations have always shown you to do what you say you will do. The professionalism is unsurpassed. This was the second time we have used your service, and if all goes well we will be doing a third aircraft soon. I have referred others to Aero & Marine and will continue to do so,” concluded Juan.
